About the Organising Departments

Department of Criminology & Forensic Science is an interdisciplinary field that studies crimes and criminal behaviour. During the courses, you will get to learn about the causes of crime, criminal behaviour, prevention of crime, crime statistics, etc. Those involved within the field of criminology typically work with law enforcement agencies, either on a local or national level. While crime rates are increasing internationally, there is a greater demand for people who can solve such cases. As a result, there is an increased demand for criminology graduates. The profession involves the process of investigating a crime from the very first step of it to the last. Such professionals are essential to making our country a better place to live. Criminologists work through various means to control, reduce, and prevent crime within civil society. Every developed country relies on the expertise of criminologists to combat their rising crime rates. Even though it is a relatively new field in India, it is among the most significant fields due to its applicability.

Digital and Cyber Forensic Science applies advanced scientific techniques and technology to investigate cybercrimes, supporting the legal system in criminal and civil inquiries. Specialists in this field analyze data from computers, mobile devices, and networks to link digital evidence with criminal activities, either by collecting evidence at crime scenes or conducting detailed laboratory analyses. They also serve as expert witnesses in court, offering crucial insights. With technology-driven crimes increasing and India facing a shortage of skilled forensic professionals—leading to millions of pending cases—this course prepares students with in-depth knowledge of digital forensics, cybersecurity, and legal frameworks.

CRYPT-X

Department of Psychology, established in 2023, is committed to becoming a globally recognized centre of excellence in psychological research, education, and practice, fostering a profound understanding of the human mind and behavior to improve individual and societal well-being. With psychology's vast scope—spanning behavior, mental processes, emotions, and diverse life experiences—graduates are equipped for careers across multiple fields, supported by growing awareness of mental health and human behavior. The department emphasizes holistic student development through a well-rounded curriculum, practical training, hands-on experience, expert faculty, experiential learning, research opportunities, interdisciplinary engagement, inclusive practices, and a strong focus on employability and skill development.

Psyche Hub

Department of Visual Communication was established in 2005, aims to nurture dynamic media professionals driven by vision and creativity. With a focus on practical experience, diverse portfolios, and industry exposure, the department empowers students to stand out through unique creative expression. Committed to shaping socially responsible individuals, it emphasizes visual-based education and production-oriented training. The mission is to promote alternative visual media for social change, foster persuasive visual discourse, and equip students with visualization skills for thriving in media industries.

VISCOM

About the Conference

The International Conference on Crime and Media aims to explore the dynamic intersection between criminology and visual communication in today's rapidly evolving media landscape. This interdisciplinary platform will bring together scholars, media professionals, law enforcement officials, and students to engage in critical discussions on how crime is represented, interpreted, and influenced by various forms of media. The conference will delve into themes such as media trials, cybercrime, crime storytelling, digital surveillance, and ethical journalism. It seeks to foster a deeper understanding of how visual and digital media shape public perceptions of crime and justice. By encouraging innovative research and dialogue, the conference aspires to contribute meaningfully to media literacy, crime prevention strategies, and the development of socially responsible media practices.
